NEW RECORDS ESTABLISHED

Nation's Railroads Handled Enormous Traffic This Year.

NO CAR SHORTAGE REPORTED

Greatest Number of Cars For Any One Week in History Were Loaded With Freight For the Week Ended Oct. 25—Seven Records Established by the Railroads of the Country Thus Far in 1924—The Figures.

New York, Nov. 19.—The report of the car service division of the American Railway association reveals that new records were established by the railroads in successfully handling enormous traffic offered to them this year. The report shows 13,497,655 cars were loaded in the three months period, Aug. 1 to Nov. 1.

Among the records established by the carriers during the nine months of this year are: Greatest number of cars for any one week in history were loaded with freight, a total of 1,112,345 cars for the week ending Oct. 25; a new high record for any week in the loading of miscellaneous freight was made during the same week, when the total was 422,890; the railroads on Oct. 15 moved 1,030,211 freight cars, the greatest movement for any one day in history; and a total of 31,700,789 cars loaded with all commodities, excluding coal, coke and ore, for the period from Jan. 1 to Oct. 25, the greatest movement on record.

Covering the year from Jan. 1 to Oct. 25 there was "the greatest movement of commodities on record." The report discloses that exclusive of coal, coke and ore, which would add 26 per cent to the grand total, 31,700,789 cars were loaded, or 363,182 more than in 1923, which had topped previous high marks of freight transportation during a similar period. The seventh high record was established in respect to the number of surplus freight cars and serviceable locomotives in storage when loading of revenue freight was in excess of 1,000,000 cars a week," the report continues. "At the same time there was no car shortage or congestion due to railroad disability. Such congestion or accumulation as existed during the year was due to inability of consignees to unload cars promptly on arrival."

Throughout the grain transit season records were broken in all sections of the country, elevators at Buffalo receiving special mention for setting new high marks. As evidence of the spectacular demand the railroads had met successfully, it was noted that the sugar beet movement in Michigan had been 35 per cent greater than in the previous year.

WORLD WAR EXCLUDED

Wars of United States Cost $6,800,000,000 in Pensions.

Washington, Nov. 19.—According to the latest tabulation made by the interior department through the pension bureau, the wars of the United States, exclusive of the world war, have cost the nation $6,836,182,860 in pensions. The figures represent pensions paid by the government beginning in the year 1790 and extending up to and including 1924. They include every war except the world war. More pensions were paid as a result of the Civil war than all the others combined, outside of the world war. The amount was $6,427,106,586. Pensions paid to Indian fighters and the widows amounted to $25,640,832. Next came the war of 1812, with pension payments reaching $46,145,923. For the war of the Revolution the United States paid $70,000,000 in pensions; for the Mexican war $56,545,364; for the war with Spain $126,673,359. In addition the government has paid $67,557,368 in pensions for its regular establishments of the army and the navy; $16,513,425 for unclassified pensions, and $168,538 pensions for the world war that have been handled by the bureau of pensions in place of the United States veterans' bureau.

Laborers Sentenced

Toledo, Nov. 19.—Six laborers were fined $10 each here by Judge Killits and sentenced to the workhouse for 90 days for refusing to file an income tax return. A seventh man, Joe Danero, alleged leader, was fined $150 and received a five months' term.

Coal Barges Sink

Gallipolis, O., Nov. 19.—Four barges of Kanawha river coal being taken to Cincinnati by the steamer John Donald were caught in the back wash at Dam No. 31 in the Ohio river and sunk.

ANTICIPATE PROSPERITY

Labor Federation Leaders See Reduction in Unemployment.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 19.—Leaders of the American Federation of Labor anticipate prosperity through the next year at least. With better times and increased production unemployment will be reduced to a minimum, unless employers attempt to cut wages, according to Matthew Woll, vice president of the federation.

No wage reductions are looked for by William E. Johnson, president of the machinists' union. "It would be folly for the employers to attempt it. The workers of today are more united than ever before and determined to maintain their present standard of living," was Johnston's comment. Continued activity in the building trades was forecast by George F. Hedrick, president of the building trades department. "I think the building boom is far from finished," Hedrick said.

Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, declined to comment on signs of prosperity other than to say that "employers are fooling themselves if they expect to put over a wage reduction on the workers of America today."

NAMED ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE

John V. A. MacMurray Succeeds Alva A. Adee.

Washington, Nov. 19.—President Coolidge appointed John Van A. MacMurray of New Jersey an assistant secretary of state. Mr. MacMurray has been for a number of years at the head of the department's far eastern division and is a recognized authority on questions of the orient.

Recent appointments to the higher ranks in the department, and to a great extent in the diplomatic service, have been in the nature of promotions within the service itself. The policy which Secretary Hughes is following is that of recognition of merit within the service and, since the passage of the Rogers bill, consolidating the diplomatic and consular services into one line, Hughes has repeatedly, in public addresses, held out to the men in the service the hope that eventually they could look forward to selection as ambassadors or ministers if their services warranted that course.

MacMurray will take the vacancy in the staff of assistant secretaries created by the death of Alva A. Adee, who was a member of the state department organization for more than 60 years. Adee was designated as second assistant secretary, but MacMurray and his colleagues are known only as assistant secretaries, without the numerical distinction as to assignment or seniority.

State Probe Sought

Ashland, O., Nov. 19.—Petitions are in circulation here and at Mansfield asking that Governor Donahey order a special investigation of the killing here of John Dalton, chemist, on Oct. 29. The county grand jury in its report failed to return indictments against nine Ashland county and city officers charged with the killing during a liquor raid.

Won't Contest "Ma's" Election.

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 19.—The election of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, Democrat, as governor of Texas, at the Nov. 4 election, will not be contested, it was announced after a two-day conference of state Republican leaders.

COOLIDGE STANDS AGAINST DISPLAY

Desires a Simple Inauguration, Devoid of Frills.

MAY DISPENSE WITH PARADE

President Not Likely to Yield to the "Social Climbers," Who Are Clamoring For an Inaugural Ball, His Intimates Say—Precedent Set by the Late President Harding to Be Followed.

Washington, Nov. 19.—A simple inauguration entirely devoid of frills is the wish of President Coolidge.

The coming inauguration will be as plain and unpretentious as any ever held in the history of the government. There will be nothing of the spectacular about it, to the disappointment of hotel and boarding house keepers of the capital. To one of President Coolidge's serious turn of mind it will be a solemn occasion and one where riotous hilarity would be out of place. It would surprise no one if the inaugural parade and the inaugural ball, time-honored features of these quadrennial occasions, should be dispensed with altogether.

President Harding set a precedent for a simple inaugural, which makes it easier for President Coolidge to follow than if the old order of inaugurations had continued without interruption.

When Mr. Harding learned that his friend, Dr. Sawyer, and other neighbors from the old home town were being held up by hotel keepers by a threat to charge wholly outrageous rates, his indignation knew no bounds and he served notice on E. B. McLean, who was at the head of the Washington inaugural committee, that all preparations for an elaborate inauguration were off and that there would be no ceremonies save the necessary formula of going to the capital and delivering his address at the east portico.

By nature, President Coolidge is even less kindly disposed toward ostentation than was his predecessor, and while it has not been so announced from the white house the belief here is that he will ban all except the most necessary ceremonies and that the inaugural will be as simple and plain as one of his New England Puritan instincts could wish.

All sorts of pressure will be brought to bear to induce President and Mrs. Coolidge to stand for an inaugural ball. It is the greatest of all occasions for the social climbers, and they can hardly bear the thought of missing it. However, those who know the president's strict views will be very much astonished if he consents to a ball.

NO THIRD PARTY

Congressman Nelson Outlines the La Follette Program.

Washington, Nov. 19.—Representative John M. Nelson of Wisconsin, manager of the La Follette campaign, declared that the third party idea will be given the cold shoulder at the meeting in January of leaders in the La Follette movement, but plans will be made for strengthening the organization already existing throughout the country, with a view to taking a vigorous part in congressional elections and again in the presidential campaign in 1928.

An outline of the program which he says will be adopted at the January meeting, where the future will be planned, follows: Retention of the independent movement on its present basis, with no third party; increase and building up of the organization formed during the campaign; maintenance of the La Follette organization in both house and senate, and activity in congressional elections, not by putting out a ticket of its own, but by support of candidates considered progressive in either of the other parties.

Their part in the presidential campaign in 1928 will depend, Nelson says, upon the situation at that time.

Tax Reductions Announced

Cleveland, Nov. 19.—Tax reductions showing substantial decreases in the rate per $1,000 were announced by County Auditor Zangerle for the city of Cleveland and eight suburbs. The rate reductions from 73 cents per $1,000 in Lakewood to 4 cents per $1,000 in Beachwood village. The Cleveland rate drops from the current rate of $2.42 per $1,000 to $2.19. The rate reductions were made possible by recent reappraisals, making their tax yield under the old rates so large that a new and lower rate could be established.

WILLIAM E. KNOX

New President of American Bankers' Association.

Knox is president of the Bowery Savings bank of New York. He began working for the Bowery bank 30 years ago.

OHIO HAPPENINGS

Expense Accounts Filed.

Columbus, Nov. 19.—Congressman Theodore E. Burton of Cleveland spent $567 in his successful campaign for re-election from the Twenty-second district, according to his expense account, filed here. He received no contributions. J. D. Clark of Dayton, unsuccessful Democratic nominee for supreme court, had no contributions and spent $1,648 in his campaign.

Robbery Charged.

Cincinnati, Nov. 19.—Federal officials took charge of Charles E. Rick, 34, Newport, Ky., and Raymond Hanna, Youngstown, O., who are charged with robbing the postoffice at New Richmond, O. Rick and Hanna were arrested after escaping from a posse which had formed when the robbery of the postoffice at New Richmond was discovered.

Sixty-Cent Gas Rate.

Springfield, O., Nov. 19.—A tentative gas rate of 60 cents per 1,000 feet was set here for two and a half years in a verbal agreement reached by the city commission and J. F. Curry of Columbus, district manager of the Ohio Fuel Gas company. This, if formally adopted by both sides, will be a boost of 10 cents per 1,000 feet to consumers here.

Revolver Was Loaded.

Gallipolis, O., Nov. 19.—Delbert Pullin, 7, of Flat Rock, W. Va., is believed fatally wounded in a local hospital following an accidental shooting by his sister, Grada Pullin, at their home. The girl thought a revolver he was toying with was not loaded and snapped it at her brother. The bullet struck him near the heart.

Facing Prison Term.

Toledo, Nov. 19.—Philip Miller, alleged "king" of bootleggers, is facing five years' imprisonment, to be started within a few days. The federal supreme court handed down a decision in which it refused to review the conviction of Miller in two cases before Judge John M. Killits nearly a year ago.

Changes Plea.

Portsmouth, O., Nov. 19.—When Wilbur L. Emmert of New Boston, charged with second degree murder for the killing of his brother-in-law, Edward Minor, last Aug. 26, was placed on trial, he was permitted to change his plea to guilty to the lesser offense of manslaughter.

Stillis and Mash Seized.

Cleveland, Nov. 19.—Two stills, each with a capacity of 100 gallons, 80 barrels of mash and 375 gallons of whiskey were seized and destroyed when East Cleveland police swooped down upon the home of Pete Tisbar, Cleveland Heights. Tisbar was taken into custody.

Fall May Prove Fatal.

Springfield, O., Nov. 19.—F. M. Stone, a sales manager, dropped from the eighth floor of the Fairbanks building and received injuries which may result in his death. He was in the office of Dr. E. R. Brubaker at the time. Stone had been despondent for some time.

Alleged Slayer Indicted.

Cleveland, Nov. 19.—The grand jury indicted Walter Sadowski, 33, of Detroit, for first degree murder in the shooting here recently of Mrs. Elizabeth Tvasko, 42.

Two Perish in Hotel Fire.

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 19.—James Bennett, 80, and an unidentified woman lost their lives in a fire that destroyed the Hotel Bothwell here, with a loss of $750,000. Twelve persons were injured.

STONE EXPECTS INDICTMENTS

Tests Legality of Publication of Income Tax Returns.

SUITS FILED BY GOVERNMENT

Federal District Attorneys Institute Proceedings at Several Points at the Instance of the Attorney General—Time Restricted in Which Public May Make Use of Income Tax Returns.

Washington, Nov. 19.—Indictments are expected soon in the government's suit to test the legality of the publication of income tax returns by newspapers.

Announcement was made by Attorney General Stone that he had instructed federal district attorneys to institute proceedings and that he believed an indictment would be forthcoming within 48 hours.

The bureau of internal revenue sent additional instructions to internal revenue collectors which will act to restrict the time in which the public may make use of the income tax records under public inspection provisions of the law. Commissioner Blair requested the collectors to limit the books to public examination to three days a week and three hours a day. Blair informed the collectors the limitation appeared necessary that their offices might continue to function without delay in disposition of general business. He suggested also that the collectors reiterate to those who examine the records the warning against publication, mentioning penalties carried in the law.

The bureau expects to take no further action in the publicity matter and the department of justice, with the views of the attorney general in the hands of the United States attorneys, along with the evidence, will do little more than exercise supervisory direction of the cases, involving the legality of publication of returns. Stone is prepared, however, to join in any plan to hasten a judicial interpretation of the apparently conflicting provisions of the law relating to publication, it was said.

FOUR SYSTEMS PLANNED

Move to Consolidate Eastern Railroads Now Under Way.

New York, Nov. 19.—Eastern railroads may be consolidated into four big systems. This may result from the general proposal recently submitted to the interstate commerce commission in the course of a series of meetings being held by railroad men here this week.

The commission has been given only a most general scheme of grouping the eastern line into four systems, with the Baltimore and Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York Central and the Van Sweringen Nickel Plate as a nucleus of each.

Railroad executives left Washington several weeks ago with the understanding that the commission would be glad to receive a detailed plan of the proposed merger for consideration in connection with the commission's consolidation discussions under the so-called tentative plan of the commission. The eastern roads now are grouped into nine systems.

Draw Four Months' Term.

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 19.—William McCreehy and Gordon Wells, who were found guilty of petty larceny last week in connection with the robbery of St. Mary's Cathedral in Burlington, Aug. 8, were sentenced to terms of from four to six months at hard labor in the house of correction. McCreehy and Wells, alleged Ku Klux Klan probationers, were placed on trial on charges of grand larceny, but the jury brought in a verdict for the lesser offense.

HERE AND THERE

It was announced in New York that Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick will resign from the First Presbyterian church March 1. In the meantime he will remain at the church as a special preacher.

New York state's privilege or franchise tax on corporations organized out of, but doing business in, that state was declared constitutional by the United States supreme court.

President Coolidge officially opened the Spavinaw water project at Tulsa, Okla., by pressing a button in the white house.

Fire on the Jersey City water front destroyed the Sinclair oil tanker William Boyce Thompson, a big barge and 87,000 gallons of gasoline, with a loss of more than $700,000.

PROBERS BAFFLED

Examine Seven Persons in Connection With Pastor's Wife's Death.

Columbus, Nov. 19.—Prosecutor King and detectives examined seven persons in their investigation of the death of Mrs. C. V. Sheatsley, remains of whose body was found in a furnace at the Sheatsley home in Bexley, a suburb. They included Rev. Sheatsley, pastor of Christ's Lutheran church, the dead woman's husband, Milton, 20, and Clarence, 16, their sons; Elizabeth, 14, and Alice, 10, their daughters; E. E. Briedeweser, Capital university student, and C. O. Strader, deliveryman for a local bakery. Every word of their stories seemed to indicate there was not a scintilla of evidence to support the theory that Mrs. Sheatsley was murdered. With equal force, the circumstances surrounding the tragedy seemed to preclude the theory of suicide.

Faced by this situation, one that can not possibly be justified, it being clear that murder or suicide must furnish the answer, the investigators frankly confessed themselves at bay. Little less amazing was the conduct of Clarence, the younger son, who admitted that he discovered the body nearly two hours before his father, that he believed his mother to be in the furnace, but that he refrained from saying anything, preferring to "let someone else find it out."

Shot by Three Men.

New York, Nov. 19.—Edward Sullivan was shot four times and wounded seriously. He was eating in a restaurant with his back toward the entrance when three men opened fire on him through a window. The bullets, shattering plate glass, drove patrons to cover. Meanwhile Sullivan emptied his pistol at the assailants, without effect. The men fled in a taxicab. Sullivan would give no reason for the attack. Police suspect a gangster's feud.

GRANTED AMNESTY

Former Premier Caillaux Pardoned by French Senate.

Paris, Nov. 19.—The French senate adopted article 2 of the amnesty bill, which carries amnesty and restoration of civil rights for ex-Premier Joseph Caillaux. Fully two-thirds of those present were members of the senate which condemned Caillaux to exile for his dealings with the enemy. Radicals already are talking of finding a place in the cabinet for Caillaux, who is recognized as the most brilliant finance minister in the history of the French republic.

Ex-Premier Poincare intervened in favor of amnesty for ex-Minister Malvy as well, and this was granted by a vote of 195 to 62. Malvy's exile already had been ended, but the senate's action made the amnesty formal and complete.

Worker Killed.

Cincinnati, Nov. 19.—Thomas Williams, 29, died of injuries suffered when an iron beam, torn loose by the force of the explosion of an air pressure tank, fell upon his chest, crushing it. Thomas Williams and Enoch Thompson were cut and bruised by flying steel. The accident occurred at the plant of the Edwards Manufacturing company.

Valuable Asbestos.

It is not very long ago that a fire on the stage of a theater was an ever-present menace to the audience. Today most of the playhouses possess an asbestos curtain which can be dropped at a moment's notice and which will absolutely confine any fire to that part of the theater. Asbestos is a mineral found in the earth just like coal and iron, and mined. A few years ago it was merely a curiosity to be found only in the laboratory of the chemist. Today it is used in many ways and forms an important factor in the industrial market of the world.

Capital of Tibet Takes Forward Step.

Washington, D. C.—"Lhasa, capital of Tibet, the Forbidden City which in all its existence has been visited by only a handful of white men, is reported about to make a jump into Twentieth century methods by constructing a hydroelectric plant," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society, which quotes from a communication to the society from John Claude White, one of the few westerners who was ever admitted to the city.

"Lhasa, the Place of the Gods, well deserves its name, as anything more beautiful can hardly be imagined than the vision of the sacred city set against its magnificent background of snow-capped mountains. Whether seen on a brilliant day, under a cloudless sky, during a thunderstorm, painted in soft, glowing tints by one of the wonderful sunsets seen only in Tibet, or by moonlight when with outlines softened and toned down, the Potala stands out like a phantom castle in ghostly splendor from among the shadows of its surrounding trees, all aspects are equally lovely.

City Dominated by Potala.

"The Potala is by far the finest building and eclipses all others in the beauty of its appearance. The present Potala was commenced in 1645 by the Grand Lama Nag-wang Lob-sang Gya-tsho, on the same site as a former building; and there is no doubt, I think, that the city is an ancient one and was in existence more than 1,200 years ago, although we can find no records giving any authentic historical account.

"The Potala dominates everything in Lhasa. The enormous mass of buildings, partly monastery, partly palace, and partly fortress, is built on a rocky ridge which stands out in the center of the valley, commanding the town and dominating the landscape. Its architecture is magnificently grand, bold in outline and design; it towers above everything, with its gray white walls and buttresses, its immense flights of steps and terraces dotted with red-robed monks ascending and descending from religious ceremonies; its dull madder-red temple walls, with carved and painted windows, showing behind black brown yak's hair hangings, surmounted by its gilded roofs and set in almost parklike surroundings of trees and meadows, with snow-capped mountains on all sides and the Kyi-chhu, the River of Delight, running clear in many channels through groves of willow or poplar.

"It is indeed a fitting shrine for the heart of any religion, and with such surroundings it is difficult to understand how the present form of Buddhism (Lamaism), as practiced in Tibet, could ever have sunk to the depths of degradation that it has reached.

"But the interior of the Potala is curiously disappointing, as it consists principally of a mass of dark passages and cells, a certain number of halls and flights of steps.

"Among the larger halls were several striking ones, especially that in which was the gilt tomb of Nag-wang Lob-sang Gya-tsho; the dome of this hall extended upward through several stories. On the tomb there was a great deal of metal ornamentation, and the whole formed a fine piece of work. On each side of the principal tomb were similar ones of smaller dimensions, those of Dalai Lamas less notable.

Gold Images and Butter Lamps.

"In another room of fairly large dimensions the walls were lined with shelves from floor to ceiling, each shelf closely packed to its uttermost extent with images of Buddha. There must have been thousands of all metals—gold, silver, copper, brass—and many were of very beautiful workmanship. In another chapel there were hundreds of golden butter lamps.

"It would be quite impossible to give even a semblance of a plan of this conglomeration of buildings, and it would take weeks, perhaps months, to visit every part of the enormous structure, capable of holding thousands of people.

"From the flat roofs of the Potala the whole valley lies mapped out below—the town to the east, a mass of low, two-storied, substantially-built houses interspersed with temples; the Jo-Khang, the most holy shrine in Tibet; the Chagpori, or school of medicine; the Turquoise bridge (Yutok Sampa), so-called on account of its green-blue tiled roof; the many channels of the River of Delight (the Kyi-chhu), beyond which lies the arsenal, and to the north the Monastery of Sera under the hills, containing 5,000 monks. Further on the Debung monastery with 10,700 inmates; the gilded roofs of the Na-chung-choskyong; and the Ling-Nor, the sacred road along which all devout Buddhists prostrate themselves in the hope that all their earthly sins may be forgiven, could be seen in places.

"There are monks everywhere in or near Lhasa. The three large monasteries of Sera, Debung and Gah-dan alone contain about 20,000, and with all the other temples and monasteries the number cannot fall far short of 30,000, while the lay population of Lhasa only amounts to about 15,000, of whom 9,000 are women, who, strange to say, carry on practically the whole of the trade done. The remaining 6,000 males are about 3,000 Tibetans and 3,000 foreigners—Chinese, Nepalese, Kashmiris, etc.

Care of Birds in Winter.

Most wild birds need food very often; and since day birds will not feed in the dark, the long winter nights of the North are a great drain on their resources. A goldfinch taken from a nest in England grew into a champion at cage-bird shows because his owner turned a light on his cage and fed him at 4 o'clock every morning in his first winter. We can hardly illuminate and refresh all our wild garden birds in winter at this inconvenient hour; but the next best we can give them is to fill well their breakfast table every morning, so that we may be gladdened by their notes in spring.—Christian Science Monitor.

70 Miles of Ruberoid!

The illustration shows the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley, England, where 70 miles of Ruberoid Roofing were used on more than 150 buildings.

Ruberoid was selected only after the architects and contractors had conducted exhaustive tests to determine the most suitable roofing from the standpoint of appearance, reliability, cost, and weather and fire resistance.

Ruberoid was the only prepared roofing used for permanent or semi-permanent buildings, including the Fine Arts Palace, which houses an art collection of incalculable value.

The confidence of the architects was completely justified when, during May, a record rainfall of 93 tons per acre deluged the Exposition and the Ruberoid Roofs kept the buildings absolutely dry.

There is a Ruberoid Roofing for every building. Come in or phone us today for samples and descriptive folders.

Varying Laundry Methods.
 "Rub-a-dub-dub is the litaney of the tub, supplanted in part by an anti-phony of washing machine in the modern American home. In Italy and Sardinia you may greet your linen being washed in public troughs along the streets, and in Normandy your clothes are dipped in flowing streams, placed on rocks, and pounded with paddles until you have visions of your little pearl buttons floating back to the molasses whence they came," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. "The round little Dutch woman's wash tub is to be found almost anywhere you turn. Along the canals, at the water troughs and boat landings the roly-poly pink-cheeked mother washes the pink and blue cottons of her Adolf and Wilhelmina in these stationary dish pans and wash tubs of hers."

Lesson for November 23
THE TRANSFIGURATION

LESSON TEXT—Luke 9:28-36.
GOLDEN TEXT—This is my beloved Son; hear Him.—Luke 9:35.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Shows His Glory.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Beholding Christ's Glory.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Glory of Jesus Christ.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Transfiguration a Preparation for the Cross.

While it is true that in this lesson the disciples are witnesses of Christ's glory, the full truth is that the manifestation of Christ in glory was to give to the discouraged disciples a foregleam of the Messianic Kingdom. The hopes of the disciples were crushed when Christ announced His death on the cross. They were unable to see how victory could issue from death.

Jesus took with Him Peter, James and John and went into the mountain to pray. His chief aim in retirement was to get the disciples apart and into a state of receptivity so that He might show them the method of the kingdom. Before going to the mountain He declared that there were some standing in His presence who would not taste of death till they should see the Son of Man coming in His kingdom (Luke 9:27; Matt. 16:28). That their drooping spirits might be revived and their confidence restored, He is transfigured before them. Two men from the upper world are sent to converse with Him about his approaching death in Jerusalem (v. 31)—the very thing about which the disciples refused to talk. Then, too, God's own voice was heard in words of approval of Christ's course, directing them to hear the Master. Surely they cannot doubt His ability now to carry into execution His kingdom plans. The purpose, then, of the transfiguration is to give the disciples a foregleam of the coming kingdom, to enable them to see the kingdom in embryo. That this is true is not only shown by the context and circumstances, but by the inspired interpretation of one who was with Him and knew all that transpired (II Peter 1:16-19 R. V.). Note the outstanding features of the kingdom as displayed in the transfiguration:

I. Jesus Christ the Glorified King on Mt. Zion (v. 29).

The glorified king on this mount was intended to symbolize the Messianic kingdom when Christ returns to the Mount of Olives in Jerusalem (Zech. 14:4-17). This is still in the future, and will be literally fulfilled.

II. The Glorified Saints With Christ (vv. 30-31).

(1) Moses, who was once denied an entrance into Palestine, appears now in glory, representing the redeemed of the Lord who shall pass through death into the kingdom. Many thousands of the redeemed have fallen asleep and at the coming of the Lord shall be awakened to pass into the kingdom.

(2) Elijah, now glorified, represents the redeemed who shall pass into the kingdom through translation. Many shall be living upon the earth when the Lord shall come, and shall without dying be changed, and thus pass into the kingdom (I Cor. 15:50-53; I Theses. 4:14-18).

(3) They talk of the very thing which the disciples refused to believe, namely, the death of Christ.

III. Israel, in the Flesh, in Connection With the Kingdom, Represented by Peter, James and John (v. 28).

Israel shall be called from their hiding place among all nations of the earth and shall be gathered to Jesus Christ the King, as the central people in the kingdom (Ezek. 37:21-27).

(1) Peter proposes to build three tabernacles (v. 33). The Feast of Tabernacles looked forward to the glorious reign of Christ. Peter caught a glimpse of the significance of the transfiguration. His proposition showed that he thought of the Feast of Tabernacles, and therefore of the Millennium.

(2) The divine voice (v. 35). At this time God Himself uttered His words, assuring them that this One in glory was His Son Jesus Christ.

IV. The Multitude at the Foot of the Mountain (vv. 37-43).

This is representative of the nations which shall be brought into the kingdom which shall be established over Israel. See Isaiah 11:10-12. The people here were grievously oppressed by the devil. About the time of Christ's first coming he did his best to harass men. Just before Christ's coming again he will be especially active, for he knows that his time is short.

Fads and Fancies in Fans of Present Time

A daring debutante of today; a sinuous Spanish lady of yesterday; a famous "fan-bearer" of King Tut's time—all, and each inimitably, contribute to the fame of the ever-fashionable fan, to its spirit of fickleness, flirtatiousness, frivolity.

Now, there are fans and fans, from the humble "palm leaf" up. And one is likely to think, first of all, of some delectable bit of feminine fluff, feathers or lace, such as the belles of old used when they spoke in the coquettish "sign language" of the fan. When you buy such a fan, you are more concerned with its suitability as a dress accessory than with its cooling capacities.

These fragile fans, made up in styles following all sorts of fads and fancies, and in many materials, you will usually find in the jewelry departments. The sticks may be made of wood, bone, ivory, celluloid, tortoise shell or mother-of-pearl. If you choose a fan whose sticks are of wood, you cannot make a better selection than sandalwood, which is often handsomely carved, and which has a fragrance, elusive but lasting, that adds ever so much to its charm. Mother-of-pearl, another of the most popular materials, is made up of calcium carbonate, just like the true pearl. It comes from the inside of certain seashells, and is usually cut in thin strips, which give to the wood foundation a lovely, iridescent color.

You can certainly find a fan made in your favorite material, for the leaves may be of silk, satin, gauze, lace or feathers, or even of skins, like parchment kid—which is sometimes called "chicken skin" or vellum, prepared in special ways.

Your paper fan probably comes from China or Japan, where the hardy rice paper is an excellent medium on which their exquisite designs may appear. Japanese fans of gauze, too, and Chinese carved fans, made of ivory and sandalwood, are lovely. Many of the finest fans are French, for the French artists know how to paint pictures on them which artists of other lands despair of imitating. Fans from Spain, Italy and England have decorations of painting, gilding or etching.

Trimnings for Every Type of Dress Material

Every kind of material has a trimming all its own this year. There seems to be almost unbreakable rules for this. And here are some of them: Trim striped material with itself laid at right angles so that it, the dress, is lined up and down and collar, cuffs, pockets and vest have their lines running across.

Trim flowered dresses with ruffles. Rows of them if you like, only one or two if you prefer, but enough to give the slightly bouffant effect.

Trim solid color dresses—cotton ones—with white bands or white bands edged with tiny ruffles or with bands of figured material.

Trim linen ones with drawnwork or with plain tucked white.

Trim georgette with lace, feathers or ribbon.

Trim flannel with ribbon or silk binding in contrasting shades.

Don't trim figured material at all—just add one little touch of draping or contrast and let it go at that.

A New Shade of Pansy

The loveliest new evening frock for fall is made of pansy purple chiffon that shades from light to dark. The dress is sleeveless and is trimmed with large circles made of narrow purple satin ribbon. These rosettes outline the skirt and graduated ones are placed on either side of the skirt from waist to hem.

EASTERN STAR

Past Matrons and Past Patrons Held
Meeting in This City.

The Past Worthy Matrons and Past Worthy Patrons association of the twenty-third district, Order of the Eastern Star, comprising the counties of Fayette, Ross, Pike and Pickaway, met in the chapter rooms in the Masonic temple in this city Tuesday evening and elected officers for the ensuing year.

The address of welcome was given by C. C. Chappellear and the response by Edward C. Rectir, of Williamsport. Miss Helen Marion and Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker favored the association with solos which were thoroughly enjoyed. Miss Abbe Mills Clarke was the accompanist.

The retiring president, Mrs. Marietta Rittenour, of Kingston, was given a handsome pocketbook as an appreciation of her valuable services. The presentation was made in a neat speech by Mrs. Wyland Gardner, of Kingston, to which Mrs. Rittenour graciously responded.

The newly elected officers are President, Mrs. Burdick Courtright Hunsicker, of this city, and a member of Heber chapter Williamsport; vice president, Mrs. Minnie Davidson Chillicothe; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Wyland Gardner, Kingston; chaplain, Mrs. Belle F. Rector, Williamsport.

The next meeting will be held in September, 1925.

Wanted His Reward.

Some time ago a bottle with its paper was dropped in the Indian ocean and picked up in the Red sea off the coast of British Somaliland by a Mohammedan named Mohamed Mustapha, who believed the paper of mystic or intrinsic value. Being unable to read its message in any of the several languages in which it was displayed, he mounted his camel and rode miles across the desert to the nearest British agent. After endeavoring to explain the nature of the find, the agent filled out the blank with the finder's name and forwarded to the Navy department in Washington. The native departed still convinced that some great reward was his, and about two months later rushed into the same office, again demanding further elucidation on a newly acquired paper. In his hand he waved a large pilot's chart of his native waters and a letter from the hydrographer thanking him for his service. The chart, he insisted, was a draft on the American government; its size, he believed, indicated a large sum of money, and he demanded indignantly to know why the local bank would not cash it for him.

CHINA'S FIGHTS MAY
OPEN TERRIBLE WARSleeping Giant Is Believed to Be Awakening.

Washington, D. C.—After more than a decade of petty political bickering over the control of China the whole country now bids fair to break out in war to determine if unification can be effected by conquest. From Peking, the ancient capital in the north, to Canton, the vast river city in the south, troops are afoot. There are marchings and counter-marchings and the sound of firing is heard in many places, chiefly along a 25-mile front in the vicinity of Shanghai.

Gen. Chi Hsieh-yuan, anfu-tuchan or military governor of the province of Kiangsu, has flatly declared that the time has come when, if China is to be unified again into one great nation, it must be done by the sword. Whether the war which now is in progress will, in fact, be fought out to so bitter an issue or whether it will in a few months break up into minor conflicts between rival provincial governors remains to be seen. The immediate fact is that a million men are under arms.

The trouble started over the rivalry of two provincial governors. The city of Shanghai, with well over a million population, is the New York of China. It is the great port of foreign trade. Geographically it lies in the province of Kiangsu. It is commanded by Gen. Ho Feng-lin, the defense commissioner. To the southward of the province of Kiangsu and the city of Shanghai lies the important province of Chekiang. Its military governor is Gen. Lu Yung-hsiang. Although the city is outside his province he claims control over Shanghai. The defense commissioner is friendly to him and admits his claim.

Likened to New York's Seizure. The situation may be put into American terms as follows: New York city lies in New York state, Connecticut is just over the border. The governor of Connecticut claims the right to rule and tax New York city. The mayor of New York city is willing to side with the governor of Connecticut. The governor of New York decides he will, by force, take charge of the city and oust the mayor.

That is the immediate situation, but what makes the situation one of world importance is that larger factors are entering.

Marshal Tsao Kun is president of China with his capital at the ancient imperial city of Peking. His greatest general is Marshal Wu Pei Fu who, in reality, is the stronger man of the two and dominates the president. These two are taking the side of the governor of Kiangsu who is attempting to take Shanghai. This might be compared to the president of the United States taking the side of the governor of New York in the imaginary American case being used as a parallel.

But China occupies a position now somewhat similar to that in this country at the time of the Civil war. South China has seceded from the rest of the country and has set up the South China republic, with Dr. Sun Yat Sen at its head. He makes his capital at the great city of Canton. He has taken sides with the defense commissioner of Shanghai and the governor of Chekiang. This may be compared to the President of the southern Confederacy at the time of the Civil war taking sides with the governor of Connecticut in the imaginary American comparison.

Now, in addition, there is far to the north the great Marshal Chang, the dictator of Manchuria and eastern Mongolia. He has taken the side of the governor of Chiang. This might be compared to the governor of Michigan, in our imaginary case, joining with the governor of Connecticut.

So there exists the alignment: President Tsao Kun, Marshal Wu Pei Fu and Governor Chi of Kiangsu on one side with President Sun Yat Sen, Marshal Chang, Governor Lu and the defense commissioner of Shanghai, Ho, on the other.

General Believed a Traitor.

There is another highly interesting military factor. General Feng is commander of the garrison of Peking. While nominally under President Tsao and Marshal Wu he is strongly suspected of having sympathies with the other side. At any moment he may throw his strength to it.

From 800,000 to 1,000,000 men are likely to participate in this war. The North China side apparently has the superiority in numbers. Marshal Wu Pei Fu, it is estimated, commands 330,000 men. General Feng, supposedly his ally, has 30,000; and General Chi somewhere near 100,000; Marshal Chang has about 150,000; Doctor Sun, 130,000; Governor Lu about 50,000, and the Shanghai commissioner a garrison of some thousands.

Blasphemers' Fines Pay for British Clubhouse

Durham, England.—Fines collected from blasphemers have paid for a handsome clubhouse opening recently at Newbrancepeth, a Durham colliery village.

The club was first suggested at a dance, where some men's "language" caused offense to a group of miners, who agreed, there and then, to stop swearing and to fine themselves if they broke their promise.

They formed the nonswearing club to receive the fines, and, strange to relate, new members were added with surprising rapidity. Everybody kept a sharp ear out for blasphemers, who were called upon frequently to pay fines, and the infant club's exchequer soon waxed prosperous.

RED SIGNAL LIGHT
LEADS ALL IN TESTGreen, Blue and Lemon
Come Next in Order.

Washington.—That red signal lights are most easily distinguished from other colors at a distance and require the lowest light intensity for unmistakable recognition, is one of the conclusions drawn from an investigation of the visibility of traffic signals conducted by the bureau of standards, Department of Commerce. Green signals came second on the list of colored lights easy to identify, but for street traffic a yellow green is considered preferable to the blue green used on the railroads. Blue ranked third on the list, but was found to require the highest intensity. The railroad yellows, it was found, were often mistaken for orange and red, and a lemon yellow gave much better results.

Several thousand observations were made at a distance of 600, 900 and 1,250 feet, using different observers. They were made under daylight conditions, under which the identification of colored lights is most difficult. On the average, a red light of 75-candle power could be identified at 600 feet, while a green light had to be of 250-candle power, a yellow 750 and a blue light 1,000. At 900 feet the requirements were 100, 250 and 1,500-candle power respectively, while at 1,250 feet they were 1,500, 2,500, 3,000 and 7,500.

The tests are a part of a program of standardization of colors for traffic signals in which the bureau is co-operating with the American Engineering Standards committee, the National Safety council and the American Association of State Highway Officials. Under the auspices of these organizations a committee has been formed which has now nearly completed a code for colors of traffic signals and for lights for building exits. This problem includes the use of colored lights on highway vehicles, along highways, and at highway crossings of steam and electric railways; the co-ordinated relation of color, form, position and number of signals and their relation to systems of flashing, moving, or other lights; and methods of specifying or defining colors for signal purposes.

World's Largest Sapphire
Is Valued at $35,000

London.—Declared to be the largest sapphire in the world, a jewel, once used as a common paper weight, has been brought from India and is now being offered for exhibition in London. The jewel is worth more than $35,000, weighs 916 carats and is in the form of a plucked flower with a short stem. It was acquired by a government official in India, who, ignorant of its value, used it as a paper weight in one of the guard huts on the Indian frontier.

The discovery of the jewel was made by the director of Indian revenue when he visited the outpost. Its history has been traced to the Twelfth century when one of the Bellala kings, while on a pilgrimage to Ceylon, was given the sapphire by a Buddhist monk. During the reign of this king the stone became the object of much veneration and was afterward captured by Malik Kaffur, the great general of Allandun. Later it came into the possession of a state official, but was lost about 1875.

Experts are of the opinion that the jewel was a hair ornament of an ancient deity, and there is, it is believed, a companion stone in existence.

Dog Kills Pet Fawn

Charlottesville, N. J.—Because an eight-week-old fawn had the affections of children of Thomas W. Reilly, superintendent of the Newark watershed, Rags, a wire-haired terrier, driven to desperation by jealousy, killed the fawn. The dog followed the deer into the woods near the Reilly home and attacked it. The dog was called off, but the fawn did not survive.

Vine Grows Lost Ring

Sullivan, Mo.—A gold ring lost 50 years ago was found by Mrs. C. C. Rose growing on the end of a potato vine in her garden. Initials revealed the identity of the owner as Mrs. J. A. Dotter. It came off her finger in washing dishes and she threw it away with the dishwater.

Washington Flooded
125,000 Years Ago

Chicago.—Some years ago, 125,000 to be exact, a great flood swept over the eastern section of the state of Washington and left the unusually beautiful scenery which exists there now, according to Prof. J. Harlan Bretz of the University of Chicago, who has made a report upon the work of his expedition in that territory this summer.

Huge canyons were cut down in a few centuries by the torrent of water, and numerous cataclysms, some of them higher than the Niagara falls, created. The giant among these waterfalls was 400 feet high and formed a river, in places three miles wide, which cut a canyon more than 1,000 feet deep. The situation, the professor asserted, has never occurred anywhere else on the earth.

J. W. Johnson Relates His Experiences
With Dread Disease.

At a meeting of the chamber of commerce Tuesday evening J. W. Johnson, editor of the Democrat and Watchman, who is convalescing from a recent attack of smallpox, gave a graphic description of his sufferings.

Mr. Johnson said that it has been nearly fifty years since he was vaccinated, but it had run out long since. He said that he now thoroughly believes in vaccination.

He said that his family physician pronounced his case the most virulent he had ever treated. Where he contracted the disease he is unable to tell, but it started with a high fever which burned him up for three days before the rash began to make its appearance on his body. He said that he was a mass of sores from head to foot and was kept wrapped up in a blanket saturated in oil for two weeks and doesn't care to undergo the ordeal again.

CONGRATULATIONS

"THE American Legion is the peculiar guardian of the great traditions of the World war. Its posts, scattered throughout the country, teach, by their presence, the lessons which the next generation should learn. Your annual conventions challenge the thought of the country to the significance of the events out of which your organization grew. You are therefore appointed to be the teachers and leaders of patriotic activity and your sacrifices in France and your service at home are the seeds out of which progress is to grow in our country. I close this word of greeting and remembrance with my congratulations upon what you have done and the great opportunity for further service which lies at your feet."

Such, in part, was the message sent by Newton D. Baker, to the sixth national convention of the American Legion held in St. Paul recently.

MAY AID VETERANS
IN INSTITUTIONS

In Oklahoma there is an organization sponsored by the American Legion, known as the soldiers' relief commission of Oklahoma, which has recently done a great service to those veterans of the World war who are confined to Oklahoma penal institutions and who, the commission finds, are for the most part either mentally deficient or suffering from physical disability. The Legion wants these facts taken into consideration in the care and treatment of these unfortunate evidences of a world at war. They base their appeal for reform and a new consideration of the incarcerated veteran upon the following facts disclosed by their survey of Oklahoma prisons:

Of the 358 former service men now confined in Oklahoma institutions, approximately 15 per cent of the whites and 10 per cent of the colored inmates were found to be either mentally deficient or otherwise psychopathic. One hundred and fifty inmates, former service men, were found to be suffering from physical disabilities. Twenty-one former soldiers in Oklahoma prisons are classified as illiterates; 20 have had no schooling whatever, while 72 men can barely read and write. Only nine whites and two colored have completed high schools, a great majority having less than a common school education. Only 41 of the 358 confined are serving second sentences; 97 are married and 86 have children.

Apparently a large number of ex-service men were attracted to Oklahoma, following the war, in search of the liquid gold called oil. And then came the "dry holes" and the business depression, resulting in many of these men, abnormal in many instances and lacking the restraints of home in other instances, being led into trouble.

In presenting their report the commission made the following recommendations:

"The confinement in a penal institution of an honorably discharged soldier, sailor or marine does not forfeit a claim on his part against the federal government, arising from his military service. Such men, however, are usually ignorant of their rights and very largely reluctant or helpless to assert them. The work done in connection with this survey is done with a view towards the establishment of these rights. We further recommend that a full-time neuro-psychiatrist expert be assigned to the prisons, that the prisoners may be closely observed and reclassified where necessary; construction of a psychopathic ward inside the prison walls, in which should be confined the mental defectives; better wards for tuberculars; separation of first offenders from hardened criminals and vocational training classes along lines of preferential selection by the inmate."

Georgia Legion Ready to Aid Atlanta Police

Asa W. Candler, national executive committeeman of the American Legion from Georgia, in a speech at Atlanta, pledged the moral support of the Argonne post of the American Legion to the Atlanta police department and offered active assistance if ever it should be needed. Mr. Candler declared: "The police force of Atlanta has been constantly hampered by interference of petty politicians. We are proud of our police force and are behind you in your efforts to enforce law and order. The Argonne post has more than 1,200 members, trained, organized and capable of meeting any emergency that may arise."

Curiosity

"And now," said the minister, concluding a talk before the Sunday school, "are there any questions you wish to ask?"

"Yes, sir," piped an urchin who had watched him intently. "Do you wear a shirt under that thing?"—American Legion Weekly.

AMUSEMENTS

"One Night in Rome," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer screen version of J. Hartley Manners' stage success, which was shown at the Met theater last night is a personal victory for Laurette Taylor.

Miss Taylor, called by Sarah Bernhardt "America's" foremost actress, established an immediate following with the appearance of her first two screen ventures, "Peg O' My Heart" and "Happiness," both delightful comedy dramas. In "One Night in Rome" which, like the two former pictures is the screen version of one of stage successes, she has essayed successfully a vivid dramatic role. She gives the part of Madame L'Enigma warmth and color that makes it one of the most convincing portrayals seen here this year.

The clear cut, fast moving story is a credit to the director, Clarence Badger, who has solved the problem of telling a mystery romance with pleasing simplicity, yet including touches that give the story character and remove the possibility of its being labeled "just another picture." The difficult task of unfolding the unique plot has been handled admirably.

The splendid acting of Tom Moore as the hero is second only to that of Miss Taylor herself, altho the other members of the unusually strong cast deserve much praise. Among those whose work stands out are Alan Hale, Miss du Pont, Warner Oland, William Humphrey, Edna Tichenor and Joseph Dowling.

More artistic and accurate settings and more beautiful photography have not been seen here this season.

"One Night in Rome" as a stage play, was written by J. Hartley Manners; he also made the film adaptation.

He Proved He Had Nerve

By JUSTIN WENTWOOD

(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"THE trouble, Mr. Higgins?" repeated Snodgrass, the head of the firm, thoughtfully. "Well, since you ask me, the reason why I am discharging you is that you don't possess the qualifications for a salesman." He broke off as Jones, the star salesman, entered his office. "Well?" he demanded in suppressed excitement.

"Couldn't land him. He's still got that grouch against our firm on account of that misunderstanding. Old Greyson wanted ten thousand dollars' worth of stuff, and he's going to place his order with the Phoenix people."

"God!" groaned Snodgrass. "That order would just about have set us up, too." He turned to Higgins crisply. "Sorry you can't stay with us, Higgins," he said. "Hope you'll have luck with your next place. Take my advice and be more independent."

Higgins, discharged, went sadly out. He was only a boy. He had seen a brilliant future as a salesman with the Snodgrass people—and then there was a certain girl. . . . The trouble was, he lacked the assurance of the other salesmen, who came in, flung their hats on Snodgrass' desk, and made themselves at home in the place. He lacked nerve. All the people he went to see treated him disdainfully.

Suddenly a thought came to him. Why shouldn't he see old Greyson and try to secure that order? If he did that his future was made. And he knew that he had all the qualifications of a successful salesman buried away in him. And there was Effie. . . . Suddenly he found himself on his way to the hotel where Greyson was putting up on his visit to the city.

Mr. Greyson would be down in a moment. Higgins waited in trepidation. At last the old man appeared, eyeing him suspiciously. "Well? Are you a representative of the Phoenix people? I telephoned them I couldn't see their man till—"

"No, I'm from Snodgrass—"

"Don't want to hear you. I turned one of your men down cold this morning. Mr. Snodgrass treated me with gross discourtesy over a—"

"You're right, Mr. Greyson. He isn't long on manners, but he puts out good stuff."

"Young man, you go back and tell him it's no use sending me any more of his men. When I turned down that fellow this morning I—"

"Can't go back," said Higgins unhappily. "He's fired me."

"Fired you? Darn him, what did he want to do that for?" Greyson demanded.

"Said I hadn't enough nerve or independence or something, so I wanted to show him I had by tackling you. Besides, I honestly do want to succeed, and I know I've got the makings of a successful salesman—"

"You have, you've got the personality. But that's neither here nor there. Mr. Snodgrass treated me with gross—"

"Yes, but can't you let bygones be bygones?" asked Higgins. "Suppose he did, it's the quality of the goods that counts. Now our goods beat those that any other firm in the country can put out at the price, and—"

"Young man, you go back to Snodgrass and tell him, with my compliments, that he's a bigger fool than I thought him."

"I certainly will deliver that message," said Higgins recklessly.

"Because you have got nerve. But as for that order, my answer's no."

"Now see here—"

"I tell you no!" shouted old Greyson. "When I say no I mean no. That order goes to the Phoenix company. Get out of here and don't pester me! I've never changed my mind yet, and my answer's no."

Snodgrass found Higgins seated in his stenographer's chair, with his feet cocked up on his own chair. He stared at this apparition. Higgins was also smoking a perfect out of Snodgrass' box. Snodgrass began to boil.

"I've told the cashier you're starting me in at a hundred plus commission," said Higgins.

"Have you gone mad?" yelled Snodgrass.

"No, Mr. Snodgrass. I've been to see Mr. Greyson and he told me to tell you you're a bigger fool than he thought you, discharging me, because I've got all the nerve that's necessary. Anyway, I've landed that order!"

Old English Church Clocks

As early as the Twelfth century mechanical clocks were known in England and used in churches, although, strangely enough, dials do not seem to have been introduced until some 200 years later, and as late as the Seventeenth century many village churches were provided with clocks which had no face.

The methods used to sound the hour were frequently most ingenious. The hour and its divisions were frequently struck on the bell or bells by ingeniously devised automatic figures, termed "jacks." There are striking "jacks" still in use at Rye, Sussex and at St. Mary steps, Exeter, and in one or two of our cathedral churches, such as Wells. The great clock of Rye, the pendulum of which swings free in the church, was paid for by the church wardens in 1561-22, and is said to be the oldest English clock still doing its work.—Dr. J. Charles Cox in London Graphic.

Good Sires Should Have Best of Care

Dairy Bulls Need Exercise and Proper Management.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Good sires are absolutely necessary to dairymen, as it is largely through the use of good sires that high-producing herds are built up, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Because of their temperament, dairy bulls are often difficult to handle; consequently they do not always receive proper care, exercise and management, and as a result fail to give best service as herd sires.

Care and Management of Dairy Bulls, is the title of a new bulletin issued by the United States Department of Agriculture as Farmers' Bulletin No. 1412, which discusses briefly the numerous problems on proper management of dairy bulls, how to handle, and how to keep them in good condition.

Newspapers and farm papers frequently tell of persons being injured or killed by bulls, as a result of improper equipment or wrong handling. Because of such occurrences, dairy bulls have come to be looked upon in some cases as necessary evils. This attitude, says the department, often means neglect in such essentials as feeding, exercise, removal of manure from pens, and various other details of care. Proper care and management of the bull will eliminate much of the danger and resultant loss of his use. A copy of the bulletin may be secured, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Sowing Sweet Clover in Spring in Small Grains

Sweet clover starts slowly and it is not often that conditions are favorable enough to get a stand by seeding in August. Some plants may make a start, but will usually not be large enough to live over winter, writes W. J. Fraser, Illinois College of Agriculture. It is much better to sow sweet clover in the spring in small grain. Where wanted for pasture the same spring as sown it can be either sown alone or with oats.

Since sweet clover starts slowly it is not as well adapted to pasturing the first spring, and two months' pasture season is lost over seeding in the spring the year before in small grain. It must not be used as pasture until the plants are at least six or eight inches high, which usually means two months after seeding. If the seed is sown the middle of April it will be the middle of June before it should be pastured. I would sow ten pounds of scarified biennial white sweet clover seed per acre. It is absolutely essential that the soil be limed if acid, and inoculated if not already so.

How Capons Should Be Dressed for Shipment

In plucking capons the feathers of the upper neck, the flight feathers and the tail feathers should not be removed, the object being to distinguish them from other fowl.

Capons can be packed in boxes. A layer of excelsior or clean straw is laid in the bottom, then a layer of dressed fowls with feet extending outward, then another layer and so on till the box is filled. Any space at the top should be filled with excelsior, straw or paper.

As to packing to prevent spoiling on warm days, this will hardly be necessary in the seasons for selling capons, November to March. Packing in ice is practiced in very warm weather for long shipments.

Sweet Clover for Pasture

The use of sweet clover as a pasture crop for cattle and sheep or a mixture of alfalfa with orchard grass or tall wheat grass will provide an excellent green pasture for the summer months. For hogs and sheep, rape makes one of the best possible summer pastures. The wise farmer will conclude that we probably will not have so favorable a pasture season next year and make provision for a green pasture through July and August.

Farm Hints

All things work together for good to them that use legumes.

Sweet clover pasture makes lots of milk. Plan to sow some next spring.

It's a wise hen that knows her own eggs, but a trapeze tells the poultryman every time.

Bees do not puncture fruit, though they will suck the juices after it is cracked or bruised.

Horses like pasture at any time, but it is not enough of itself to keep up the strength of work animals.

Farming without legumes may be compared to writing checks on the bank without making any deposits.

Co-operative marketing is being urged by government experts as a remedy for present agricultural conditions.

Egg size and shape is inherited. Gradual selection of those birds which in addition to a large number also lay "selects" will in time eliminate birds laying lower-grade eggs.

MAD DOG SCARE

Mrs. Martin, of Darbyville, Bitten on Arm—Taking Pasteur Treatment.

Darbyville people are very much excited and frightened owing to the presence Monday of a mad dog.

The dog, which was a large stray Shepherd, on Monday afternoon bit Mrs. O. E. Martin, lacerating her arm and also bit eight or ten dogs in the village. The dog was killed and the head was sent to the state board of health. The board reported that the animal had a positive case of rabies and ordered that all the dogs which had been bitten should be killed and this was done.

Dr. F. E. Ginder is administering the Pasteur treatment to Mrs. Martin and it is thought she will not suffer any ill effect from the wound.

Route of Storks in Migration.

Some interesting details of the route followed by storks in migration, as ascertained by the well-known investigator, Herr Christian Mortensen, are given by the Danish Ornithological magazine. Between 1901 and 1920, 1,500 storks were ring-marked in Jutland under his auspices, and information was obtained as to 55 of them. They flew southward from Jutland in September, then to the east along the Oder to the western Carpathians, across Hungary to Transylvania, thence to the Sea of Marmora, and probably along the coast lands to Asia Minor and Egypt, and onward to the Transvaal, Natal, and Orange Free State. Their rate of flight during migration is estimated at 186 miles a day on an average. The distance from Jutland to the Orange Free State is about 15,000 miles. These birds remain in the South until the end of January, and then probably return by the same route.

Pests.

All near-sighted persons don't wear glasses. New York farmers have almost exterminated blacksnakes. Now they go to the Reptile association of the world, buying snakes at fancy prices, to check field mice and rats that are ruining crops. The snake has his rightful place and function in nature. So have most of the other "pests" which men destroy without reason, to satisfy his repressed lust for killing. Scientists say that each toad is worth $19.44 to a farmer, by reason of the insects and worms that it consumes.

RED CROSS

Annual Roll Call is Now on in Pickaway County Chapter.

Yearly the American Red Cross invites all the people to enter its ranks and thru membership take part in the great humanitarian work performed by this organization.

The annual roll call of Pickaway county chapter, is now on with T. D. Krinn's roll call chairman. Mr. Krinn made a most efficient chairman last year and it is his earnest desire to have a renewal of all members and many new ones added.

A duty is resting upon all to aid the ex-service man and his family and we should make it unmistakably clear the debt we owe every American soldier for their lofty, unselfish sacrifice in wartime call.

In the year the chapter has been in active service it has been able to assist many ex-service men in obtaining from the government, hospitalization, compensation, home treatment or vocational training. It has brought into the county in back compensation over $7000 and monthly awards ranging from $8 to over $100 per month, according to the per cent of disability.

The Red Cross has proved to be an indispensable instrument for the alleviation of suffering and you should give it your generous support. The membership fee is $1.

Facts for Marksmen.

A series of experiments made in France on the vibrations set up in gun barrels by the effects of firing indicates another allowance that the expert marksman should make for the individual peculiarities of his rifle. The shock of firing sets the particles of the gun barrel oscillating in elliptic curves, producing deflections of the barrel. The periods of vibration in different rifles vary between one twenty-fifth and one five-hundredth of a second, and the experiments indicate that a small-bore gun is to be preferred to one of larger caliber, because the bullet can leave its muzzle before the deflection of the barrel has become considerable.

Credit Accorded Luther.

One story ascribes the first Christmas tree to Martin Luther, who conceived the rather pretty idea that the dark branches of the young spruce, gayly illuminated with colored candles and hung with its bright ornaments and gifts, would suggest to the children the dome of heaven with its innumerable stars, and, perhaps, thoughts of praise and gratitude to Him who is the Giver of all good things around them.

CAKES
with that "fresh air" taste

Delicious—and so beautiful in their even shape and coloring. And little wonder! For they were baked with "fresh air"—in the wonderful oven of the Estate Gas Range. The fumes of burning gas never enter this oven—only fresh air, heated and sterilized by the exclusive Estate method, touches the food.

And this heated fresh air is distributed so uniformly throughout the oven that no matter in what part you place your baking, the same uniform results are certain. No "pot-watching", no shifting pans—the oven ends all this worry.

Decide today you'll be one of the many thousands of good cooks using the Estate. We'll gladly show you the range and all its features.

Plants and Flowers.
Growing plants and flowers are such a delight to many people in all seasons of the year that all kinds of ingenious means are being shown for making it possible to have at least green vines anywhere in the house that can boast a little daylight and sunshine. A Chinese wall bird may be hung on the frame of a window, over a writing desk, over a mantel, or near the little table at the side of a bed, with yards of ivy trailing down over its plumage. Canary bird vines will grow almost anywhere that ivy will; and if the vase is hung close to the window nasturtiums can be substituted for the ivy. The earth that is put in the vase should not be kept too moist, and if there is a hole somewhere at the bottom for drainage the nasturtiums should freely bloom indoors.

Marines Guarded Mails in 1775.
The first authentic record of marines acting as mail guards deals with the marines of Connecticut from the city of Hartford, says the Paterson (N. J.) Morning Call. It occurred in May, 1775, when re-enforcements, together with mail dispatches and a chest containing 500 pounds specie, were sent to Fort Ticonderoga, which had been captured from the British a short time before. Owing to the difficulty of securing reliable guards a detachment of eight marines was sent to watch over the treasure and dispatches. According to a letter from Jesse Root to Silas Leano those marines were "well equipped and well spirited" and executed their task in excellent fashion.

THE BEAUTY OF HOLINESS.
Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name; bring an offering, and come before him; worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness.—1 Chron. 16:29.

England's Oldest Tree.
An English correspondent, writing about England's trees, says: Some 12 years ago an interested person wrote to Lord Harcourt, then Mr. Lewis Harcourt, first commissioner of works, suggesting that a fence should be placed around the famous old oak tree in Hampton Court park. He received a prompt reply: "This fine old oak tree is especially under the care of the keepers and staff of the park, who have strict instructions from Mr. Harcourt as to its preservation and protection." The tree in question, which is by the Long water, is said to be over 1,000 years of age, and is possibly the oldest tree in England. Its trunk, two feet from the ground, measures 42 feet in circumference. It is hollow, of course, and affords standing room in its interior for a dozen persons.

Miscalculation.
When I was a little girl it was my mother's custom to take our family to visit our grandparents for several weeks. When I grew older, I was allowed to stay longer than the others, and make the trip back home under the care of the conductor, who was a friend of the family. On these trips home, I always wanted to go into the diner. One time I decided to go, although I had only about a dollar in my purse, which greatly limited my choice. A man from home came in and sat down with me. Of course, I thought he would pay for my meal, so I changed my order to chicken a la king and I don't know what all else. After enjoying the feast my friend paid only for his own meal.—Exchange.

Proof of Napoleon's Genius.
The genius of Napoleon discovered at length the supreme refuge of the wise man, but only after he had wasted many years in various futile activities, such as remaking the map of Europe and the legal code of France. It was after attaining true wisdom that he wrote: "The bed has become a place of luxury to me. I would not exchange it for all the thrones in the world."—Exchange.

Origin of Expression "O. K."
The expression "O. K." is a colloquialism. It may be used as a noun or as a verb. The origin of the expression is in doubt. It is sometimes ascribed to Andrew Jackson as his humorous abbreviation of "oll korrect" (all correct); sometimes to an Indian chief, Old Keokuk, as his signature by initials. Another possible origin of the expression was brought to light in 1909, at the time of the death of Cornelius Kendall of Chicago. Mr. Kendall was the youngest son of Orrin Kendall, from whose initials the use of "O. K." as meaning "all right," is said to have sprung. Orrin Kendall, as the story goes, was a member of the Chicago board of trade battery in the Civil war. He also was a member of the firm of O. Kendall & Sons, whose bakery was in Chicago. The firm furnished bread and crackers for the army, and on the crackers were the initials "O. K." The crackers are said to have been the only ones the soldiers relished, and their expression, "These are all right," later developed into "These are O. K."

Faithful Church Attendants.
From various facts recorded in the course of the old Sagas one gathers that in Catholic days the Icelanders fasted rigorously, especially in Lent and Holy week, which last they called the "Dumb-bell Days," writes Darley Dale in the Ave Maria. One also learns that they were very strict about going to mass on Sundays and holy days, despite the terrible storms of wind and rain and snow in winter. In 1118, in the time of Bishop Gizor, there was so terrible a snowstorm in Holy week that none could attend the religious services. On Easter day, however, which fell on April 14, men could get to mass, though some of them died of the cold.

Human Life Too Short.
By all the rules which nature observes among humbler mammals, 100 years ought to be a very ordinary age for a human being. Where is the mammal which, unless its life is cut short by accident or disease, fails to live to an age five times as great as the time it took to reach maturity? A fairly careful survey of the field answers "Nowhere." Indeed, the ratio of total life to maturity is more likely to be six, seven or eight, than five. But man, whose maturity cannot be placed at less than 20 or 22, thinks he is doing well when he passes three-score and ten, and only one out of many thousands reaches the age of one hundred.

MESSAGE TO LEGION

AT THE sixth annual national convention of the American Legion held recently in St. Paul, the following message from President Coolidge was read in the convention hall in lieu of the President's attendance at the meeting:

"The thought of the world turns increasingly toward peace, its preservation and perpetuation. I am glad to be able to say to the Legion that this thought is more and more finding leadership and direction. We are justified, as never before, in the hope for great accomplishments, through the co-operation of the nations, in the ways of peace. You of the Legion, better than any others, know what war means. So I am happy to extend to you my confidence that highly important progress is making along the road which leads to the elimination of war from this world. You have done me honor in attributing to me ability to add to the inspiration which Legion members must always draw from contemplating their great part in the history of their country and the world. Theirs has been both in war and in peace, a record of unselfish readiness to serve."

WOMEN MEMBERS ARE LIVE LEGIONNAIRES

A bursting shell in the Chateau-Thierry area overturned an ambulance but the woman who was driving it was pulled out of the wreckage only slightly injured. That accounts for the fact that Mrs. J. W. Atkins is still alive—so much so that she is counted one of the live Legionnaires of which the Lowe-McFarlane post of the Legion, Shreveport, La., boasts. The energy and spirit that enabled Mrs. Atkins to enroll many members in the Lowe-McFarlane post recently is the same she displayed in the great war.

She served six months as an ambulance driver at the French front with Miss Anne Morgan's famous unit, the American Committee for Devastated France, which did volunteer service with the Third French army. Mrs. Atkins, if she so minded, could relate many vivid and thrilling stories of her experiences while driving her ambulance and caring for the wounded. She was at the battle of Chateau-Thierry where her ambulance was overturned by a shell. "We were there to help and not to be helped and performed service just as a man," Mrs. Atkins says. She did all the repair work on her ambulance that did not require the service of a skilled mechanic. On one occasion she repaired 17 punctures in one day on her machine. Nor is Mrs. Atkins the only woman member of which Lowe-McFarlane post boasts.

Many years ago a sparkling little girl playing outside the walls of St. James palace in London caught the eye of a prince who called her to him and gave her a string of beads, saying: "You're a bright little girl; here take these beads to go with your brightness."

The prince later became King Edward of the British empire and the little girl grew into refulgent womanhood, retaining and emanating the same cheerful spirit, as a United States army nurse, which had once pleased the prince of Wales, and which, incidentally, is now pleasing the members of Lowe-McFarlane post of which she is a most active member and member-getter.

Mrs. Butler was born near St. James palace in London, but following her marriage came to this country. During the war Mrs. Butler "joined up" as a nurse and made existence brighter for the boys at Camp McArthur base hospital, Waco, Tex. Following her discharge she went to Shreveport, where she is successfully operating a small poultry farm known as "Blue Bird Cottage," a homey little bungalow place surrounded by flowers and shrubbery. Although Mrs. Butler lives 14 miles from Shreveport, "the little lady of Blue Bird Cottage" very rarely misses a Legion meeting and is always smiling when she gets there.

Legion Men Have Raft, but No Water in Lake

Legionnaires of Woodstown, N. J., know how disappointed Noah would have been if, after building him an ark, the promised deluge had not been forthcoming to float the said ark. Recently they built him a raft of great dimensions to be floated upon the waters of the Woodstown and vicinity "Memorial Lake," only to have their raft left high and dry on the shores of a waterless lake. As a result of litigation with one of the abutting property owners the lake basin is an excellent replica of the Sahara desert, and, to decide whether or not there shall be water in the lake, the good citizens of Woodstown will go to the polls soon. The Legionnaires have adopted as their campaign slogan, "Fill the lake to float our raft."

New Department Commander

Raymond G. Littlefield of James Stanton post, Central Falls, Rhode Island, was elected department commander of the Legion for Rhode Island at the annual convention of the Legion at East Greenwich recently.

Flushing Ewes to Bring More Lambs

Flock Owners Always Interested in Any Plan to Increase Crop.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Flock owners are usually interested in anything that will increase the lamb crop. A bulletin put out by the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington on "Flushing Ewes and Other Means of Increasing Lamb Yields," Bulletin 996, gives the results of tests with 17 groups of ewes.

Gain Made by Ewes.

Ewes not fed in breeding season gained 1.7 pounds and had a 129 per cent lamb crop. Those getting feed of various kinds gained eight pounds per head and had a 147 per cent lamb crop. In terms of 1,000 sheep, this would mean 280 more lambs. The ewes got only one-half pound of grain per day at that time.

It made little difference how the ewes were fed so long as they gained. Some got extra pasture, some were fed oats, some corn and oats, and some various mixtures of corn, oats, bran and linseed meal. In the grain fed lots as well as in the pasture lots, some were above the 147 per cent average and some below, showing that the kind of feed was not important.

"Flushing" is an old English term and originally meant turning the ewes on some special green forage crop just before breeding season. In the government experiments the pasture-flushed ewes did better some years. Other years the grain-fed ewes had more lambs.

Have Ewes Gaining.

The main thing seemed to be not to have the ewes in high flesh but to have them gaining in flesh. Of those that gained from one to seven pounds, 34 per cent produced twin lambs. Of those gaining seven to thirty pounds, 44 per cent had twins. The two poorest lots among those getting extra feed were ewes that were already in high flesh.

Old ewes had a higher proportion of twins than did young ewes. There was very little difference between the breeds as to the number of twins dropped. The Dorsets stood at the top, however, with the fine woolled breeds at the bottom. The rams did not seem to influence the number of twins produced.—Charles I. Bray, Animal Husbandry, Colorado Agricultural College.

How Butter Is Formed by Tiny Globules of Fat

Milk really consists of a number of very tiny globules of fat, each one enclosed in a thin "skin," floating in a fluid. If the milk be left to stand, a certain number of these globules rise to the surface and become cream, or the separations can be made artificially.

The cream is then churned, and the violent motion breaks the skins of the globules, so freeing the particles of fat. These particles, under proper conditions (the temperature must be right, and the cream must contain a proportion of acid) then become adhesive and stick to each other. The result, after treatment by hardening with a little cold water, washing and probably salting, is what we call butter.

What is left is buttermilk, or the fluid that has been robbed of its fat.

Roughage for Sheep

Shredded corn fodder is very much more adapted to feeding these sheep than timothy hay. But to make a really good roughage, about 50 per cent of the roughage should consist of good legume hay, such as alfalfa or clover. If this is impossible, you can make up for it in the grain ration, of course, with a little extra quantity of oats. A little bonemeal or partly ground limestone should be given. Allowing the ewes free access to corn fodder, you should adjust the grain ration to the point where a good condition is maintained.

Getting Rid of Mice

To rid the chicken house of mice keep the feed in the mouseproof bins. Prevent the mice from multiplying by removing their breeding places. These will be found under boxes, boards, loose flooring and the like. If a good cat or two can be kept around the premises, they will help hold the mice in check. The use of good traps is recommended, but not poison, unless it can be handled in such a way as to make sure that the fowls will not get access to it.

Large Yield of Milk

In order to secure a large yield of milk, it is quite as important that the cow or herd is handled properly as that proper feeding is practiced. There have been many instances where the best cows were kept, and where good methods of feeding were practiced, and still results fell far short of what might be expected, simply because the animals did not receive that kindly treatment which is so essential to a cow giving much milk for a long period.

Keep Best Milk Producers

The dairyman who put a sign on his barn with the slogan "A cow that enters through this door must milk ten thousand pounds or more" set a goal for himself. We can't all have every cow a 10,000-pound producer, but we can eliminate the poorest and keep the best producers in the herd.

The Old, Tender Mocking Voice

By MARGARET WIDDEMER

(©, Doubleday, Page & Co.)

"I'M NOT sure I wanted to come back," said Kitty's voice—the voice, half-penitent, half laughing, wholly casual.

He turned. It was really Kitty, lying back in her chair, with one white-clad foot on the fender in the old luxurious way. The firelight glared on her hair and made rosy shadows on her flowered gown. And yet four years of absence and silence lay between this moment and their last parting.

He cried out, "Kitty! Kitty, darling!"

"Really I, Cliff," said the old, tender, mocking voice.

She smiled over at him.

"But you always knew our love was eternal. That I would never believe to anyone but you."

He reached out his hands to her, little and slim and rosy in the blue chair they had always called hers.

"No, dear," she said, lifting her hand, the bracelet he had given her a little chilled. He wanted to touch her and hold her, now she was here again and his. But she had always been like this—elusive. He must be patient. He would reach for the little hands, the little body, when she was talking intently and off guard. And she would laugh and yield caressingly in the old way.

She leaned to him again, talking in that quick, earnest way he had been waiting for. It always came, slipped in between her laughter.

"Cliff, did you dream about me lately? Oh, Cliff, do you remember, when we'd only been engaged a week, how one night I dreamed that we were in a wood together, talking and love-making, and we promised in the dream that we would always come to each other when we needed each other—and that night you'd dreamed it, too?"

"Yes, I remember," he said, thrilled. "We did that five times. And we always found out that we had had the same dream."

"But hasn't it come to you since—lately?" She looked at him wistfully. "Because twice—lately—it has come to me."

He stared at her, half-terrified. Such dreams had been very far from him since Kitty's departure. He had fought all dealings with the unknown, those half-gay, half-serious affairs with the borderlands that Kitty had led him into. A man drops such things as he gets older. And yet—how did he know? It was true. Twice lately he had walked in a dream-wood with Kitty, whom he had tried to forget. And now he did not need to forget her—now she was here, and his feet always!

"Twice, lately, to me, too, Kitty," he said awed. "Then we were right."

She laughed out, as a child does, for sheer happiness.

"Yes, we were right. Our love was forever . . . but we always knew it was."

"Yes," he echoed her gravely. "We always knew it was. And yet . . ."

"There's no 'yet'—there's only 'always'."

And after a time she suddenly rose. "I must go now—for a little while," she said, smiling. She flushed a little as she said it. Her crisp summer frock, thin, white, with its printed pink roses, nearly brushed him, and her eyes looked thoughtfully into his.

"I wonder why I thought you needed me so dreadfully."

"I always do—I always will!"

"Yes—that way—I, too. But just now—the particular urgent thing. Don't you know? You always know before."

He shook his head. That was a trivial thing compared to the fact that, for ever so little a while, he was not to see her.

"But it won't be a moment now—or it will only seem like a moment—before we are together for always. Our love's forever, you know, dear! I wonder what it was you needed me so for . . ."

"Kitty!" He flung out his arms to keep her, but she was gone, with a little laugh, before he could clutch more than her dress. . . .

He stood up, catching his breath suddenly. Something was still in his hand, a brittle something like a butterfly's wing. He knelt to the firelight and opened his hand, slowly, carefully, as if in a dream. . . . Yes, there lay something in his hand—it had been flowered muslin once; it was ash and crumbling now, and the tracery of roses was dingy brown. He ran from his knees, white and trembling, and the ash fell in his palm—such an ash as muslin might make after four years shut underground. . . .

There was a sound of many feet on the stair, and voices calling him. "Cliff, she's ready now! Helen's ready!"

Helen came down slowly, tall and smiling in her going-away gown, ready for him. . . .

How could he tell—how could he have known it was eternal; that marriage with Kitty, who had died when their first child was born? How could a lonely man go through all the years unmarried? And yet . . .

He looked down with terror at the camp ash, clinging to his finger—still . . .

"Come, Cliff!" called his bride's voice from the stair-foot. He went forward to her.

"Thank God!" he said silently over and over. "Thank God Kitty did not know why she came!"
